FIRST RELEASE · OCTOBER 30, 2026

AI Inbox
Legal packet

Drafts for counsel review. Not legal advice. The product name is still a placeholder, and every bracket in these pages has to be filled in before anything is published.

Prepared for

[Company legal name]
[address]

What this packet is

Privacy policy, terms of service, copyright notice, trademark notice, a short explanation of what is and is not protected, acceptable use, cookies and tracking, and a DMCA takedown page. The running product was not changed.

Contents

Eight drafts for a first release of AI Inbox. Page numbers follow this contents page.

1. Privacy Policy 3
2. Terms of Service 5
3. Copyright Notice 8
4. Trademark Notice 9
5. IP Protection Summary 10
6. Acceptable Use Policy 12
7. Cookie and Tracking Disclosure 14
8. DMCA Takedown 16

Privacy Policy

Draft for counsel review. Not legal advice. Product: AI Inbox (name not final) Last updated: October 30, 2026

This policy explains what [Company legal name] (“we,” “us”) collects when you use AI Inbox (the “Service”), how we use it, and the choices you have. The Service is an email client. You review a reply and approve it before it is sent.

Replace every bracket before publishing. If the product name changes, replace “AI Inbox” throughout.

Who we are

The Service is operated by [Company legal name], [address]. Privacy questions go to [privacy@example.com].

Information we collect

Account information. You sign in through WorkOS. We receive identifiers WorkOS provides, such as your name, email address, and a user id. We do not ask you for your mailbox password.

Mailbox and message data. If you connect Outlook or Gmail, we access the mail those providers allow, including messages, headers, and the content needed to rank mail, write a summary, draft a reply, and fill a form. We also store the drafts you edit, the forms and files you upload, and a record of what you approved and when.

Usage information. We collect basic logs of how the Service is used, such as sign-in time, pages loaded, errors, and the browser and device type. Cloudflare, which hosts the site, may also log IP address and request data as part of delivering the site.

Saved on your device. The browser keeps a few of your own choices, such as whether you dismissed a banner and whether this tab is in demo mode. Those values stay in the browser. See the Cookie and Tracking Disclosure.

We do not sell your personal information. We do not use it for advertising.

How we use it

We use this information to run the Service: to sign you in, show your inbox, prepare summaries and drafts, fill forms from your email and the files you uploaded, and send a reply only after you approve it. We also use it to keep the Service secure, fix errors, and meet legal duties.

An artificial-intelligence model helps produce summaries, rankings, drafts, and form fills. The model API key stays on our servers. It is not sent to your browser, and we do not put your mailbox tokens in the browser.

Who else processes it

We share data with providers only so they can do their part of the Service:

- WorkOS handles sign-in and the session.
- Microsoft handles Outlook mail, when you connect an Outlook account.

- Google handles Gmail, when you connect a Gmail account.
- Our AI provider receives the message content and files needed to produce a summary, ranking, draft, or filled form. The provider is not allowed to use that content to advertise to you. Name the provider here before launch: [AI provider].
- Cloudflare hosts and delivers the site.

We may also disclose information if the law requires it, or to protect the rights, safety, and security of our users and the Service.

Connecting Outlook or Gmail is optional, but the Service cannot read or send mail for an account you have not connected. Microsoft's and Google's own privacy policies apply to those accounts.

How long we keep it

We keep account and mailbox data while your account is open and you stay connected. If you disconnect an account, we delete the stored access for that account and stop syncing it. If you close your account, we delete or de-identify your personal information within 30 days, except for logs and records we must keep for security, fraud prevention, or law. Those leftover records are kept only as long as that purpose requires, and no longer than [24 months] unless the law requires more.

Backups may hold a copy until the backup cycle overwrites it.

Your choices and rights

You can disconnect Outlook or Gmail in Settings. That stops new mail from that account and deletes our stored access for it. You can ask us to access, correct, or delete the personal information we hold about you, or to export it, by emailing [privacy@example.com]. You can sign out at any time. Signing out ends your session. It does not by itself disconnect a mailbox.

Depending on where you live, you may also have the right to appeal a refusal, or to complain to a privacy regulator. We will not discriminate against you for making a request.

The Service is not for anyone under 18. We do not knowingly collect information from children.

Security

We use reasonable safeguards, including encryption in transit and access limits on the servers that hold mailbox tokens and the AI key. No method of storage or transmission is completely secure.

Changes

If we change this policy, we will update the date above and, if the change is material, post a notice in the Service. Continued use after the update means you accept the revised policy.

Terms of Service

Draft for counsel review. Not legal advice. Product: AI Inbox (name not final) Last updated: October 30, 2026

These terms are a contract between you and [Company legal name] (“we,” “us”) for AI Inbox (the “Service”). By creating an account, connecting a mailbox, or using the Service, you agree to them. If you do not agree, do not use the Service.

Replace every bracket before publishing. The Acceptable Use Policy, Privacy Policy, Cookie and Tracking Disclosure, and DMCA page are part of these terms where they say they are.

The Service

AI Inbox helps you read mail, see a summary, edit a draft, and send a reply. A reply is not sent until you approve it. After you approve, you have a short time to undo the send. You are responsible for what you approve.

We may change, suspend, or stop any part of the Service at any time. The first release may be incomplete, and features may fail.

Accounts

You must be at least 18 and able to form a contract. You sign in through WorkOS. You are responsible for activity on your account and for keeping your sign-in secure. Tell us at [legal@example.com] if you believe someone else is using your account.

You may connect Outlook, Gmail, or both, including more than one account. You confirm you have the right to connect each mailbox and to send from it. You can disconnect an account in Settings.

Your mail and files

You keep ownership of your email and the files you upload. You give us a limited right to host, copy, and process that material only to run the Service for you, including sending a message you have approved and using an AI model on our servers to summarize, rank, draft, and fill forms. This right ends when the material is deleted under the Privacy Policy, except for short-lived backups and records we must keep by law.

Acceptable use

You will follow the Acceptable Use Policy. You will not use the Service to break the law, send spam or malware, probe or disrupt the Service, or access a mailbox you are not allowed to use. We may suspend or close an account that does this.

The Service is not advice

Summaries, rankings, drafts, and filled forms are generated by software. They are not legal, financial, medical, or other professional advice. They are not a substitute for your own judgment or for a qualified professional. You are solely responsible for reading a message and for anything you approve and send.

AI output

AI summaries, reasons, drafts, and form values can be wrong, incomplete, or out of date. We do not promise that they are accurate, complete, or fit for a particular message. You must review them before you approve a send. We are not liable for an inaccurate summary, ranking, draft, or filled form.

Email delivery

We do not promise that any message will be sent, delivered, received, or delivered on time. Mail can be lost, delayed, blocked, or altered by us, by Microsoft, by Google, by the recipient's provider, or by events we do not control. A failed undo, a duplicate send, or a send to the wrong person is your responsibility once you have approved it. We are not liable for lost, delayed, or undelivered email, or for the contents of a message you approved.

As-is, and no warranty

THE SERVICE IS PROVIDED "AS IS" AND "AS AVAILABLE." TO THE FULLEST EXTENT THE LAW ALLOWS, WE DISCLAIM EVERY WARRANTY, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING MERCHANTABILITY, FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE, TITLE, QUIET ENJOYMENT, AND NON-INFRINGEMENT. WE DO NOT WARRANT THAT THE SERVICE WILL BE UNINTERRUPTED, SECURE, ACCURATE, OR ERROR-FREE, OR THAT ANY MESSAGE, SUMMARY, DRAFT, OR FORM WILL BE CORRECT OR DELIVERED.

Some places do not allow an implied-warranty disclaimer. In those places, the disclaimers apply to the fullest extent allowed.

Limitation of liability

TO THE FULLEST EXTENT THE LAW ALLOWS, [COMPANY LEGAL NAME] AND ITS DIRECTORS, EMPLOYEES, AND SUPPLIERS WILL NOT BE LIABLE FOR ANY INDIRECT, INCIDENTAL, SPECIAL, CONSEQUENTIAL, EXEMPLARY, OR PUNITIVE DAMAGES, OR ANY LOSS OF PROFITS, DATA, GOODWILL, OR BUSINESS, ARISING OUT OF OR RELATED TO THE SERVICE OR THESE TERMS. THIS INCLUDES USE OR INABILITY TO USE THE SERVICE, LOST OR UNDELIVERED EMAIL, AND AN INACCURATE AI SUMMARY, DRAFT, OR FORM. THIS APPLIES WHETHER THE CLAIM IS IN CONTRACT, TORT, OR ANY OTHER THEORY, AND EVEN IF WE WERE TOLD THE DAMAGE WAS POSSIBLE.

TO THE FULLEST EXTENT THE LAW ALLOWS, OUR TOTAL LIABILITY FOR ALL CLAIMS RELATING TO THE SERVICE OR THESE TERMS WILL NOT EXCEED THE GREATER OF (A) THE AMOUNT YOU PAID US FOR THE SERVICE IN THE THREE MONTHS BEFORE THE CLAIM OR (B) ONE HUNDRED U.S. DOLLARS.

Some places do not allow certain limits. In those places, the limits apply to the fullest extent allowed. These limits are a basic part of the bargain for a first release offered at little or no charge.

Indemnity

You will defend, indemnify, and hold harmless [Company legal name] and its directors, employees, and suppliers from any claim, loss, and expense (including reasonable attorneys' fees) arising out of your use of the Service, your mail or files, a message you approved or sent, your connection of a mailbox, or your breach of these terms or the Acceptable Use Policy. We will give you prompt notice of the claim, and you will not settle it in a way that admits our fault or imposes a duty on us without our written consent.

Ending use

You may stop using the Service and close your account at any time. We may suspend or close your account, or stop the Service, at any time, with or without notice, including if we believe you have broken these terms. Sections that by their nature should survive, including disclaimers, liability limits, and indemnity, will survive.

Law and disputes

These terms are governed by the laws of [State], excluding its conflict-of-law rules. Courts in [County, State] will be the exclusive venue, except that we may seek injunctive relief in any court for misuse of the Service. You waive any right to a jury trial to the extent the law allows. You may bring a claim only on an individual basis, not as a class or representative action, to the extent the law allows.

Whole agreement

These terms, the Privacy Policy, the Acceptable Use Policy, the Cookie and Tracking Disclosure, and the DMCA page are the whole agreement between you and us about the Service. If a court holds one part unenforceable, the rest stays in effect. We may update these terms by posting a new version. If you keep using the Service after the update, you accept the new terms.

Copyright Notice

Draft for counsel review. Not legal advice. Product: AI Inbox (name not final) Last updated: October 30, 2026

Short notice

Use this line in the product footer, the repository README, and on design files once the company name is filled in:

Copyright © 2026 [Company legal name]. All rights reserved.

What this reserves

[Company legal name] owns the copyright in the original parts of AI Inbox that its people created. That includes original source code, original screen layouts and visual design, original marketing copy, original icons and graphics made for the product, and these legal drafts.

All rights in that original work are reserved. No one may copy, modify, distribute, publicly display, or make a derivative of it except with prior written permission, or where the law gives a narrow right that cannot be waived (for example, a right to quote a short passage for criticism). Using the hosted Service under the Terms of Service is permission to use the running product. It is not permission to copy the codebase or the design.

“All rights reserved” does not mean the idea of an approve-and-send email client is locked up. Copyright covers the particular expression: the code as written, the words as written, and the design as drawn. It does not cover ideas, methods, or facts. See the IP Protection Summary.

What this does not cover

Third-party components keep their own copyright and licenses. They are not our property, and this notice does not change their terms. In this repository that includes, among others:

- Application libraries under MIT, Apache-2.0, ISC, BSD, and similar permissive licenses (including React, TanStack, Tailwind, Zod, and Lucide icons).
- Fonts shipped through Fontsource (Inter, and any of Host Grotesk or Instrument Sans that are bundled) under the SIL Open Font License.
- Build tools such as Lightning CSS, which is MPL-2.0.

Do not strip those license notices from dependency files. Do not add an MIT, Apache, or other open-source license to the root of this repository unless [Company legal name] decides, in writing, to open-source the original work. Until that happens, the original work is proprietary.

Permission

Requests to reuse original code, copy, or design go to [legal@example.com]. We have no duty to grant them.

Trademark Notice

Draft for counsel review. Not legal advice. Product: AI Inbox (name not final) Last updated: October 30, 2026

Notice to publish once a name is in use

[Product name] is a trademark of [Company legal name].

Until a name is chosen and actually used on the live product, do not print this notice on the website. “AI Inbox” is a working title only.

Use the ™ symbol for an unregistered mark. Do not use ® unless a registration has issued in that country. There is no registration for this product as of October 30, 2026.

Suggested line

[Product name]™ is a trademark of [Company legal name]. Outlook is a trademark of Microsoft. Gmail is a trademark of Google. WorkOS is a trademark of WorkOS. Cloudflare is a trademark of Cloudflare. Other names are the property of their owners. Using those names here is only to say which services the product connects to.

About the placeholder “AI Inbox”

“AI Inbox” is descriptive. It says the product is an inbox that uses AI. Descriptive phrases are weak as trademarks. They are hard to register, hard to enforce, and easy for someone else to use in ordinary speech. This notice does not create trademark rights in the words “AI Inbox,” and it does not stop another product from using similar words.

Before launch, pick a distinctive name, search it (United States Patent and Trademark Office, plus a web and app-store search), and have counsel clear it. Then replace “AI Inbox” in the product, these drafts, and this notice. Rights in the real name begin with use in commerce, and a registration makes them easier to enforce. This draft does not file an application.

What others may not do

Once the real name is in use, others may not use it in a way that is likely to confuse people about the source of a product, or that suggests we made or endorse their product. Ordinary descriptive use, such as saying a message is in an “AI inbox” as a common phrase, is not something this notice tries to forbid.

Report confusing uses to [legal@example.com].

IP Protection Summary

Draft for counsel review. Not legal advice. Product: AI Inbox (name not final) Last updated: October 30, 2026

This page is for the team. It says what the legal packet actually protects, and what it does not. Publishing a notice does not, by itself, stop a competitor from building a similar product.

What is protected

Original code, copy, and design. Copyright in the original source, the original words, and the original visual design belongs to [Company legal name] as soon as the work is created. The Copyright Notice says that work is all rights reserved. Someone who copies our screens, our marketing text, or our code without permission is infringing that copyright. The DMCA page is how we receive claims that something on the Service infringes someone else's copyright.

The brand, once there is a real one. Trademark protects a name or logo used to identify the source of the product. It does not exist in a meaningful way until we use a distinctive name in commerce. A later registration strengthens it. The Trademark Notice is the wording to use after that name is chosen.

Contracts with users. The Terms of Service, Acceptable Use Policy, and Privacy Policy bind people who use the Service. They limit our liability, require users to cover claims that come from their mail, and set rules for how the Service may be used. They do not bind a stranger who never signs up and who writes their own email client.

What is not protected

The idea. An email client that summarizes mail, drafts a reply, fills a form, and waits for a person to approve the send is an idea and a method. Copyright does not cover it. A competitor may build the same flow in their own code and their own words.

The placeholder name. "AI Inbox" is descriptive. The trademark notice does not reserve it. Do not tell anyone the name is registered. Do not use ®.

Third-party material. React, TanStack, Tailwind, Lucide, the open-source fonts, and the other packages in `apps/web/package-lock.json` stay under their own licenses. We may use them as those licenses allow. We may not relicense them as all-rights-reserved, and we may not claim we wrote them. Their notices stay in the lockfile and in the packages.

User mail and uploaded files. Customers keep ownership of their email and their documents. We have only the limited right, in the Terms, to process that material to run the Service.

Patents. Nothing in this packet is a patent application. Functional inventions are not protected here unless counsel later files for a patent. Do not assume the approve-and-send flow is patented.

A notice without a registration. The copyright notice is useful and should go on the product. It is not a substitute for registering copyrights in the code or the design if we later want statutory damages in a U.S. lawsuit. Counsel can file those registrations. This packet does not file them.

What the team should do

- Keep the original work proprietary. Do not add an open-source license at the repository root.
- Leave third-party license notices in place.
- Do not copy another product’s code, copy, icons, or marketing text into this repo.
- Do not copy another product’s visual identity. Taking inspiration from layout patterns is not the same as tracing their assets.
- Fill every bracket, have a lawyer read the packet, and publish the privacy policy, terms, acceptable use, cookies, and DMCA pages before a public launch that connects real Gmail or Outlook accounts. Google’s restricted-scope review expects a public privacy policy.
- Pick a real product name before treating the trademark notice as live.

What these papers cannot do

They cannot stop a lawsuit by themselves, guarantee a win, or make a descriptive name exclusive. They put users on notice, state the license we are not granting, and give the company the contract terms counsel asked for on a first release. A lawyer in [State] still needs to review them before they go on the site.

Acceptable Use Policy

Draft for counsel review. Not legal advice. Product: AI Inbox (name not final) Last updated: October 30, 2026

This policy is part of the Terms of Service. If you use AI Inbox (the “Service”), you follow it. “You” means the person or company that holds the account. Questions and reports go to [abuse@example.com].

The Service reads mail you connect, drafts replies, and sends a reply only after you approve it. You are responsible for the mailboxes you connect and for every message you approve.

You must have the right

Connect only mailboxes you are allowed to use. Upload only files you are allowed to use. Do not connect a coworker’s mailbox, a client’s mailbox, or a shared mailbox unless you have that right. Do not send mail that pretends to be from someone else.

Do not misuse mail

You may not use the Service to:

- Send spam, bulk unsolicited mail, or mail people have asked not to receive.
- Phish, spread malware, or send anything that is designed to break into an account or a computer.
- Threaten, harass, or defame anyone.
- Send content that is illegal in the place you send it from or to.
- Hide who a message is from, or forge headers, in order to mislead.
- Use an AI summary or draft as if it were a fact you have not checked, when you know it is being relied on for a legal, medical, or financial decision. The Service is not professional advice. You still have to read what you send.

Do not misuse the Service

You may not:

- Probe, scan, or attack the Service, Cloudflare, WorkOS, Microsoft, or Google, except under a written test we have agreed to.
- Bypass sign-in, the session cookie, or the rule that mail sends only after approval.
- Overload the Service, or use it to mine, scrape, or resell mailbox access.
- Copy the product’s code or design. Use of the hosted Service is not a license to the codebase. See the Copyright Notice.
- Reverse engineer the Service except where the law expressly allows it and you cannot waive that right.
- Use the Service if you are under 18.

What we may do

If we believe you have broken this policy, the Terms, or the law, we may remove content, disconnect a mailbox, refuse a send, or suspend or close the account. We may do that with or without notice when we need to protect someone, comply with law, or protect the Service. We may keep logs needed to investigate abuse, as the Privacy Policy describes.

We are not obligated to monitor mail. We do not promise to catch misuse.

Reporting abuse

Email [abuse@example.com] with the account, the message, and what happened. For copyright claims, use the DMCA page instead. This inbox is not for product support.

Cookie and Tracking Disclosure

Draft for counsel review. Not legal advice. Product: AI Inbox (name not final) Last updated: October 30, 2026

This page says what AI Inbox stores in the browser, and what it does not. It is part of the Privacy Policy. Questions go to [privacy@example.com].

The first release does not run an advertising network and does not sell personal information. The current web app does not load a third-party analytics script such as Google Analytics. Do not claim that it does until one is actually added. If one is added, update the “Product analytics” section, name the provider, and change the date at the top before you publish.

Strictly necessary: the session cookie

Sign-in is handled by our API through WorkOS. After you sign in, the API sets a session cookie so the browser can stay signed in. The browser sends that cookie with requests to the API. The page itself does not receive your WorkOS token or your Microsoft or Google mailbox token.

This cookie is required for a signed-in product. If you block it, you cannot stay signed in. Signing out clears it. It is not used to advertise to you.

Before launch, fill in the real cookie name, lifetime, and flags from the API (for example HttpOnly, Secure, SameSite): [session cookie name, lifetime, and flags].

Saved on your device, not sent as a tracker

The app stores a few of your own interface choices in the browser:

- Whether you dismissed the demo banner (`localStorage`).
- Whether you dismissed the getting-started panel (`localStorage`).
- Whether this tab is in the demo (`sessionStorage`). Demo mode ends when the tab’s session storage is cleared.

Those values are not advertising identifiers. Clearing site data for this site removes them.

Cloudflare

The site is hosted on Cloudflare. Cloudflare may process IP address and request data to deliver the site and to resist abuse, and it may set its own cookies for that purpose. That processing is described in Cloudflare’s privacy policy. We do not use Cloudflare to build an advertising profile.

Product analytics

Not enabled in this release. No analytics vendor is named in the app, and no analytics cookie is set by our code today.

If we later turn on product analytics, we will use it only to understand the Service: for example, which screens are opened and whether a feature fails. We will not use it to sell data, and we will not use it to advertise to you on other sites. We will name the provider in this section, say what it stores, and say how long it keeps it:

- Provider: [none in this release]

- What it would collect: [pages and feature events, not mailbox contents]
- How to opt out: [browser control or in-product switch]

Mailbox contents, drafts, and uploaded files are not analytics events. They are processed as the Privacy Policy describes, to show your inbox and to prepare summaries, drafts, and forms.

What we do not do

We do not use cross-site advertising cookies. We do not allow ad networks to follow you through the Service. We do not sell personal information.

Your choices

You can block or delete cookies and site data in your browser. Blocking the session cookie means the signed-in Service will not work. Blocking Cloudflare’s security cookies may make the site fail its abuse checks. The preference values above can be cleared with the browser’s site-data controls.

If a law where you live requires a consent banner before optional analytics, we will not turn on optional analytics until that banner exists. Strictly necessary sign-in storage does not wait on that banner.

DMCA Takedown

Draft for counsel review. Not legal advice. Product: AI Inbox (name not final) Last updated: October 30, 2026

[Company legal name] respects copyright. This page is how a copyright owner, or their agent, asks us to remove material on AI Inbox that they believe infringes their work. It follows the notice-and-takedown process in the U.S. Digital Millennium Copyright Act, 17 U.S.C. § 512.

This address is for copyright notices only. It is not for product support, privacy requests, or trademark complaints. Those go to the addresses in the other pages of this packet.

Before this page is published, counsel should designate an agent with the U.S. Copyright Office and put the registered agent's details below. A notice sent to an unpublished draft does not start the clock.

Designated agent

[Company legal name] Attn: DMCA Agent [street address] [city, state, ZIP] Email: [dmca@example.com] Phone: [phone number]

What the Service hosts

Users may upload forms and files, and the Service stores drafts and account material so it can run. Users, not [Company legal name], are responsible for whether they have the rights to what they upload. Mail sitting in Microsoft or Google is also governed by those companies.

Sending a takedown notice

Send the notice to the agent above. It must include all of the following. A notice that leaves them out may be ignored.

1. Your physical or electronic signature.
2. The copyrighted work you claim is infringed. If many works are covered by one notice, a list of them.
3. The material you claim is infringing, and enough information for us to find it. A URL, a screen name, a file name, or a message id is the kind of detail that works. "Your whole site" is not.
4. Your name, mailing address, telephone number, and email address.
5. A statement that you have a good-faith belief that use of the material is not authorized by the copyright owner, its agent, or the law.
6. A statement that the information in the notice is accurate, and, under penalty of perjury, that you are the copyright owner or are authorized to act for the owner.

Do not send a notice you know is false. Under 17 U.S.C. § 512(f), a person who knowingly misrepresents that material is infringing may be liable for damages, including costs and attorneys' fees.

What we do with a complete notice

If the notice is complete, we may remove or disable the material, and we may tell the user who posted it. We may also send the notice, including your contact details, to that user. We may suspend or close accounts of repeat infringers in appropriate cases.

Removing material does not mean we agree the claim is valid.

Counter-notice

If your material was removed and you believe it was a mistake or was misidentified, you may send a counter-notice to the same agent. It must include all of the following:

1. Your physical or electronic signature.
2. Identification of the material that was removed, and the location where it appeared before it was removed.
3. A statement, under penalty of perjury, that you have a good-faith belief the material was removed or disabled as a result of mistake or misidentification.
4. Your name, address, and telephone number, and a statement that you consent to the jurisdiction of the Federal District Court for the judicial district in which your address is located, or, if you are outside the United States, for any judicial district in which we may be found, and that you will accept service of process from the person who sent the takedown notice.

If we receive a valid counter-notice, we may forward it to the person who sent the takedown. Unless that person files a court action and tells us, we may restore the material in not less than 10 and not more than 14 business days after we receive the counter-notice. We do not have to restore it where the law does not require us to.

Other intellectual property

Trademark concerns about the product name go to [legal@example.com], not to this agent. The product name is not final. See the Trademark Notice.
